

Philosophical Ethics

debating right and wrong

The Runaway Traincar

Cultural Relativism

Ruth Benedict
1887-1948

Cultural Relativism

"There are many answers to questions of right and wrong."

Ruth Benedict
1887-1948

Cultural Relativism

"There are many answers to questions of right and wrong."

Ruth Benedict
1887-1948

- Ruth Benedict was an American anthropologist whose encounters with indigenous peoples convinced her that there was no universally valid set of moral principles.

Cultural Relativism

"There are many answers to questions of right and wrong."

Ruth Benedict
1887-1948

- Ruth Benedict was an American anthropologist whose encounters with indigenous peoples convinced her that there was no universally valid set of moral principles.
- For her, culture and community, not reason and humanity, dictate moral principles.

Cultural Relativism

Ruth Benedict
1887-1948

Cultural Relativism

The argument from cultural differences

Ruth Benedict
1887-1948

Cultural Relativism

The argument from cultural differences

Ruth Benedict
1887-1948

Different cultures have different views about right and wrong.

---

Thus there are no universal moral principles.

Cultural Relativism

The argument from cultural differences

Ruth Benedict
1887-1948

Different cultures have different views about right and wrong.

---

Thus there are no universal moral principles.

- This may seem like an obvious argument, and yet...

Cultural Relativism

The argument from cultural differences

Ruth Benedict
1887-1948

Different cultures have different views about right and wrong.

---

Thus there are no universal moral principles.

- This may seem like an obvious argument, and yet...
- Does it really follow that there are no principles simply because people may disagree about what they are? We disagree about many things, but that doesn't establish that there are no facts.

Cultural Relativism

The argument from cultural differences

Ruth Benedict
1887-1948

Different cultures have different views about right and wrong.

---

Thus there are no universal moral principles.

- This may seem like an obvious argument, and yet...
- Does it really follow that there are no principles simply because people may disagree about what they are? We disagree about many things, but that doesn't establish that there are no facts.

Divine Command Theory

God

Divine Command Theory

"Thou shalt not kill!"

God

Divine Command Theory

"Thou shalt not kill!"

God

- This theory is popular among those who see religion as providing an authoritative set of moral principles.

Divine Command Theory

"Thou shalt not kill!"

God

- This theory is popular among those who see religion as providing an authoritative set of moral principles.
- It offers an account of the meaning of moral principles -- they are to be understood as commands issued by a supreme being.

Find out more

Garry Winogrand "Flip"

Credits

Built with:

Rstudio

xarignan html presentation framework

download this presentation or print it

editorial suggestions and comments: requires a (free) GitHub account.